EURASIA 2.0 RUSSIAN GEOPOLITICS IN THE AGE OF NEW MEDIA

EDITED BY MIKHAIL SUSLOV AND MARK
BASSIN

“This wide-ranging and challenging collection brings together some of the world’s leading scholars to provide a powerful insight into contemporary Russian and Eurasian developments. The exciting new framework of ‘digital geopolitics’ shows interdisciplinary studies at its best. The vivid and lively contributions range freely across geopolitics, the media, movies, and various forms of identity politics. The digital world is here presented as a new public sphere in which nations and regions look for themselves, and in so doing, provides a unique window into the soul of a people.”—Richard Sakwa, University of Kent

“Eurasia 2.0: Russian Geopolitics in the Age of New Media: a most innovative important collection of essays on the geopolitical perspective of post-Soviet Eurasian identity politics and national interest analyzed in the spatial context by digital media.”—Jutta Scherrer, Ecole des hautes études en sciences sociales

ABOUT THE BOOK

This book focuses on the new phenomenon of digital geopolitics in the former Soviet Union. It considers how media serve as platforms for the contestation of geopolitical ideas and the articulation of new political identities. It explores new possibilities and threats associated with the digitalization of geopolitical knowledge and practice.
